At Home

She epitomizes California cool, but Carolyn Murphy is still an East Coast girl. The hard-working catwalker who grew up Florida and Virginia, moved west five years ago in search of open air, surf-worthy water, and a Hollywood film career. She found a place to call home in the free-spirited L.A., enclave of Venice Beach, drawn to the arty, hippie-tinged charms of the area and a social atmosphere that reminded her of being back in New York.

Artful Presentation

"I always use these special serving trays when I'm entertaining. Each one is designed by local artists to support disabled children in Vietnam and Nepal. I love to show them off and encourage my friends to support this organization, too."

Hand-painted Tray with Faces, $28, from the Spiral Foundation.
